RACE-RECOVERY INDEX

The Race-Recovery Index, a project of the Kirwan Institute, is designed to measure how all people, but particularly marginalized populations, are faring in the midst of the national recovery efforts. The two primary tools for measurement that will be used on a monthly basis will be the national unemployment figures by race, and the Federal contract procurement of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA). Additional forms of measurement may eventually be added. As new information becomes available, the Index will be updated accordingly and will include commentary about trends in the findings.

NATIONAL UNEMPLOYMENT

The overall National unemployment rate remained the same (9.7) from January to February of 2010. Within this maintained rate, however, there were some developments in terms of a few particular demographics. For instance, the unemployment rate of Whites increased a tenth of a percentage point, which was fueled largely by the half-percentage increase in the unemployment rate of White women. On the other hand, despite an overall decrease in unemployment among Blacks, the unemployment rate among Black men increased two-tenths of a percentage point. Most other demographic groups (White men, Black Women, Latinos, youths) experienced at least a slight decline over the previous month.¹

An increase in unemployment among the top (Black men) and bottom (White women) of the spectrum may represent the scope of the recession as it continues, showing that the economic pain is being felt across the country and across industries and sectors, hitting communities of color the hardest.

These charts show how the disparity that exists between races is even greater among teenagers. Even despite modest decline in the unemployment rates of Black and Latino youth, a large gap persists between Whites and non-Whites.

FEDERAL ARRA CONTRACT PROCUREMENT

Contracting figures from the Federal Procurement Data System continue to show that firms owned by minorities and disadvantaged business owners² are receiving disproportionately small shares of Federal Recovery contracts, and even smaller shares of contract pay-out value.³ This is a trend which has become increasingly disparate as the Recovery has unfolded, potentially signaling a diminishing sense of accountability regarding equity.

Table 3. Federal ARRA Contract Procurement as of March 5, 2010

Business Owner	Contracts	% of Total Contracts	Action Obligations Amount	% of Total Action Obligations
Small Businesses	13,724	38.7%	$6,452,057,418	30.2%
Women Owned	3,036	8.6%	$1,225,789,112	5.7%
Non-White Owned	5,439	15.3%	$3,627,972,395	17.0%

² Women-owned, Latino-owned, and Black-owned businesses account for 28.2%, 6.8%, and 5.2% of all U.S. businesses respectively, according to the US Census Bureau, 2002 Economic Census Survey of Business Owners

³ Per Federal Procurement Data System representative, "Action Obligations" represent the value of contracted work elements to date.

KIRWAN INSTITUTE

The Kirwan Institute for the Study of Race and Ethnicity is a university-wide interdisciplinary research institute. We generate and support innovative analyses that improve understanding of the dynamics that underlie racial marginality and undermine full and fair democratic practices throughout Ohio, the United States, and the global community. Responsive to real-world needs, our work informs policies and practices that produce equitable changes in those dynamics.
